Welcome to Bedales

Bedales was founded to be different from the schools of its time. Where others imposed conformity, Bedales nurtured individuality, initiative and enquiring minds. True to its roots and founding principles, the school places emphasis on collaboration and care for others. Our students are naturally inquisitive and eager to explore and challenge ideas. They build strong relationships with each other and their teachers based on mutual trust and respect. This enables students to concentrate on the complex business of learning, developing and becoming their own person.

Bedales continues to be an innovative school; having led the country in replacing many GCSEs with our own more interesting and demanding Bedales Assessed Courses, we are constantly refining our offer to equip our students with the skills they need in a fast-changing world.

Our calendar of events gives a sense of the breadth and depth of the opportunities at Bedales – we encourage students to develop their interests across a wide range of subjects and activities. The students who will gain most from being part of our community are those who will give most and take part fully.

As a community, we have high expectations, and ask demanding questions of each other in the search for improvement. Previous inspections combined with student and parental research provide strong validation that we are achieving our aims.

I look forward to introducing you to our school, its students, beautiful campus and unique educational experience.

The Bedales aims

Developing inquisitive thinkers with a love of learning who cherish independent thought.

Enabling students to develop their talents through doing and making.

Fostering individuality and encouraging initiative, creativity and an appreciation of the beautiful.

Enabling students, former students, parents and staff to take pride in the school's distinctiveness and to feel valued and nourished by the community.

Cultivating interest beyond the school: engaging with the local community and developing a national and international awareness.

13+ and Bedales Assessed Courses

Our Block 3 (Year 9) curriculum is a rich, experiential year. It starts with a challenging week of activities in the Lake District, where students work with tutors and Sixth Form mentors. On their return, they are introduced to the curriculum so they can make informed subject choices. They also get a taste of the co-curricular life of the school, with plenty of opportunities for Sport, Music, and Drama.

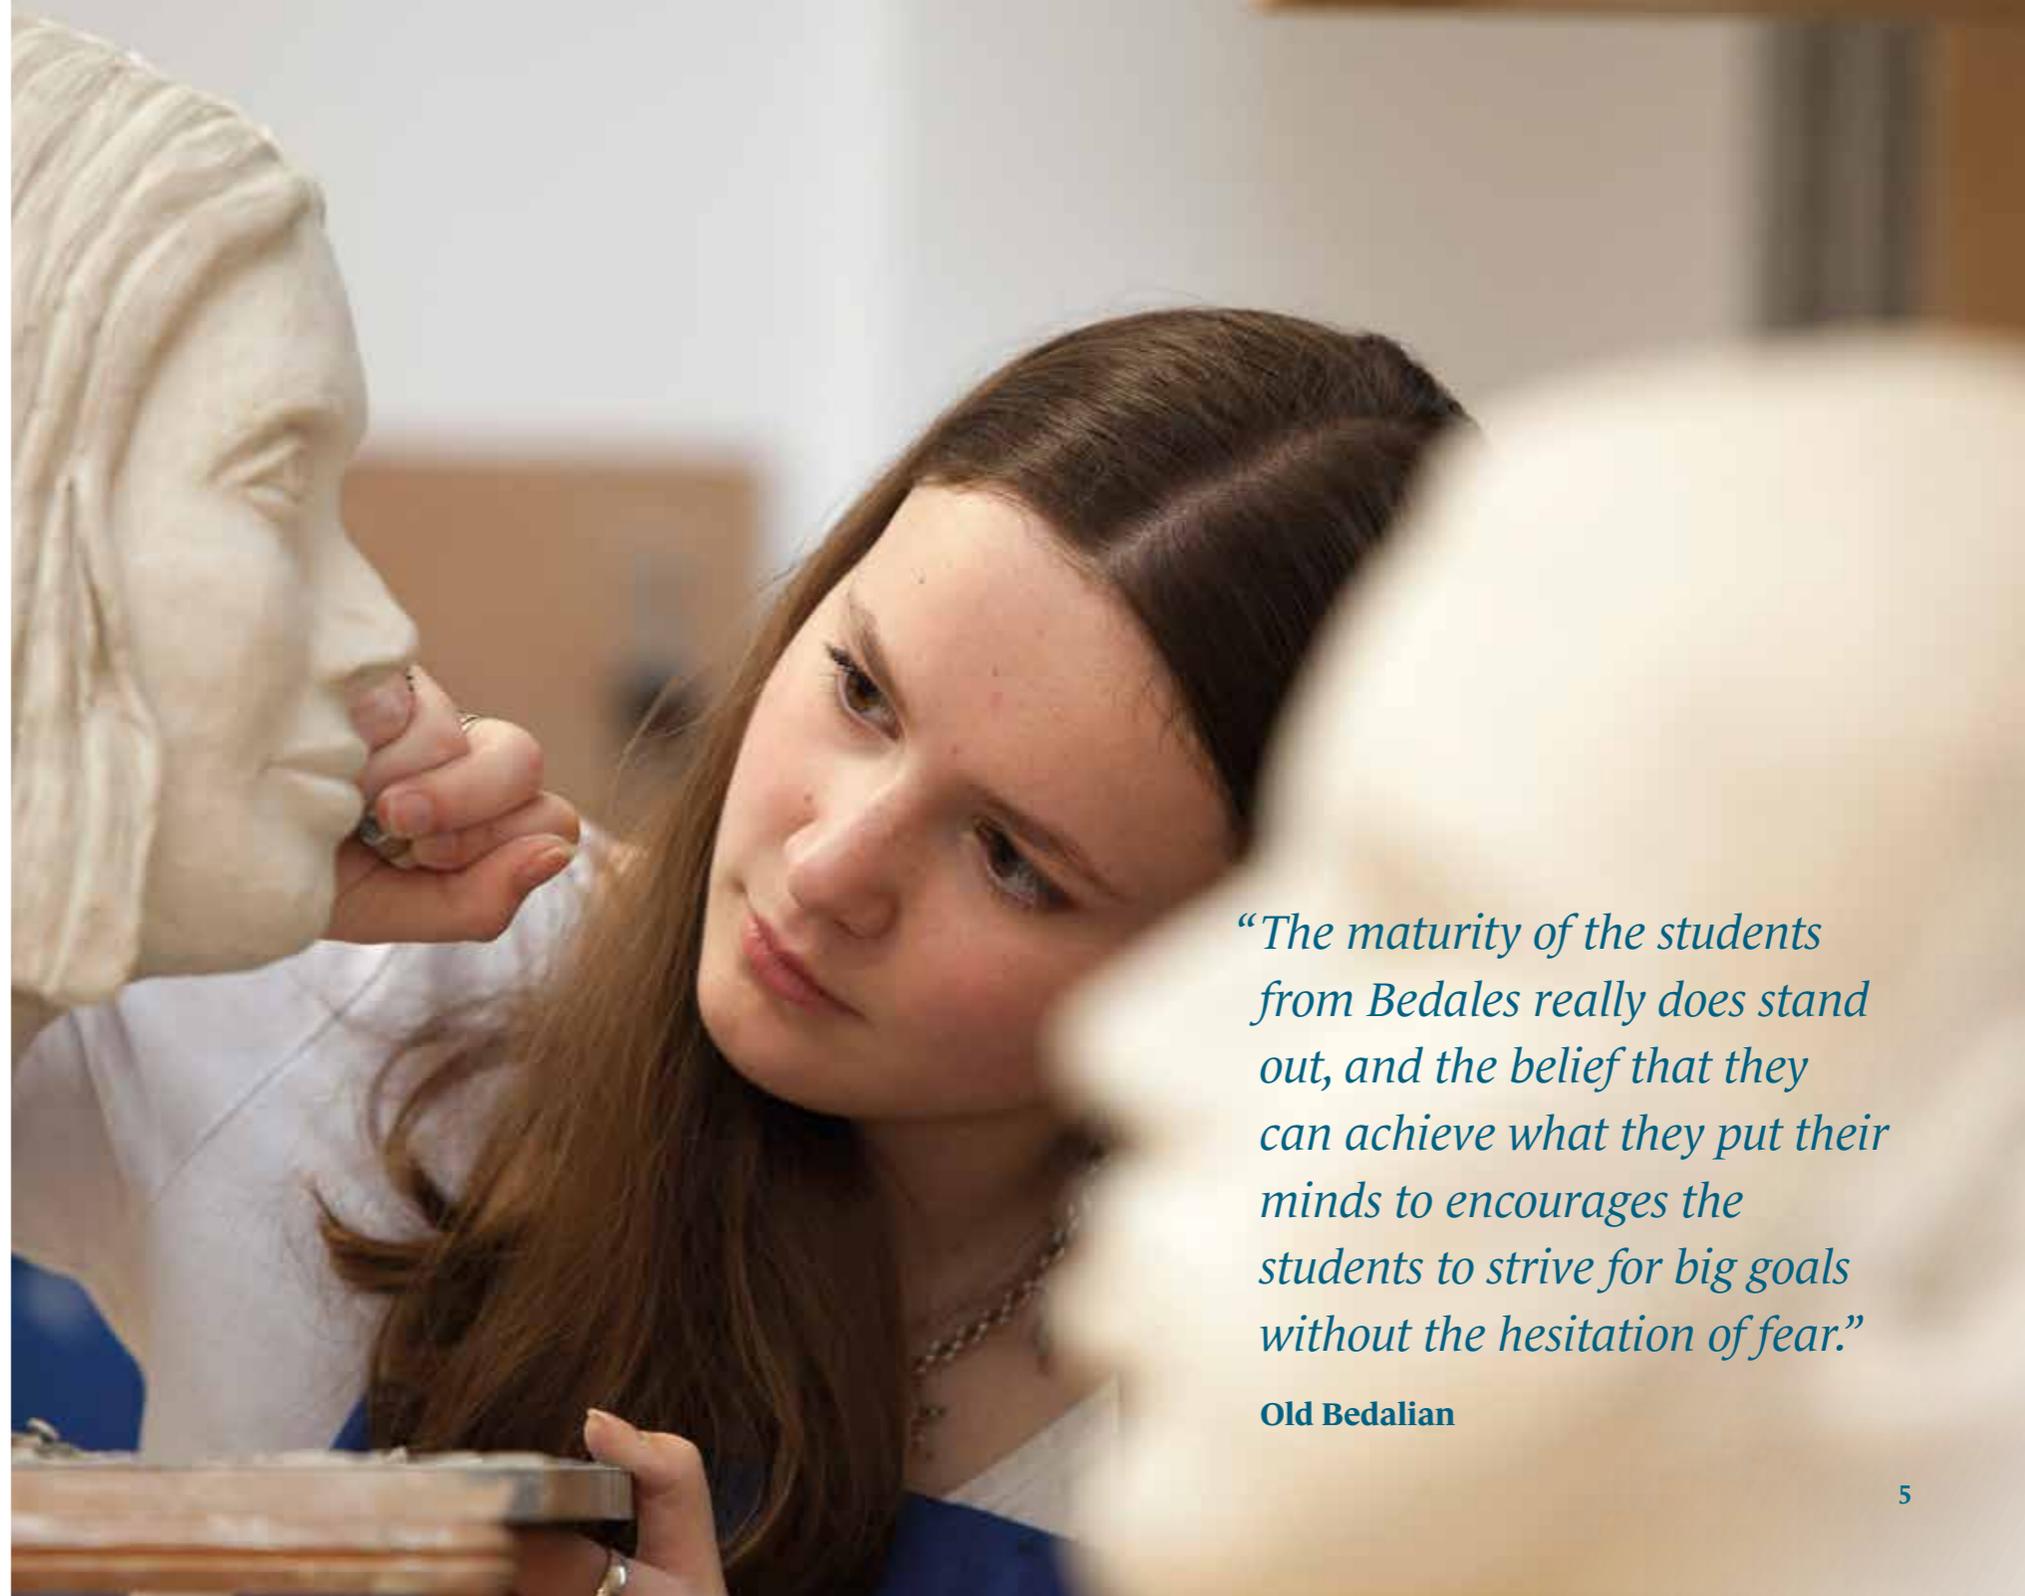

Students are also encouraged to give something back to the community. This includes weekly outdoor work in their tutor group, and culminates in a celebration at the end of the year using the produce they have grown and prepared. During the course of Block 3 it is expected that each student will establish effective working habits and an appropriate balance between academic work and other pursuits.

Bedales has a long tradition of leading the way in educational change. Our determination to do what is right for our students has led to the creation of a unique curriculum, Bedales Assessed Courses (BACs), for Blocks 4 and 5 (Years 10 and 11) with a range of innovative and intellectually rigorous courses designed to complement a core of IGCSEs. The curriculum is built around a compulsory group of five core IGCSE subjects and two non-examined courses, plus a choice from 14 BACs. Latest additions to the BAC menu include Digital Game Design, Sports Science and Global Awareness.

BACs are broad and stimulating, offering significant cross-curricular and independent-learning opportunities. Well-regarded by universities, they provide the ideal foundation for Sixth Form, university study and work. Assessment includes written assignments, presentations, projects and performances, together with terminal examinations as appropriate. Each course is externally moderated.

In class, and particularly in BACs, students are encouraged to question, to challenge, and to think for themselves.

“The maturity of the students from Bedales really does stand out, and the belief that they can achieve what they put their minds to encourages the students to strive for big goals without the hesitation of fear.”

Sixth Form

The Sixth Form at Bedales is an unusually broad and stimulating environment in which to spend the final years at school and to prepare for life beyond, combining serious academic responsibility and opportunities for leadership.

Our aim is that students should leave us with at least three good A Levels, with a broad set of subjects encouraging highly-individualised selections. New course offerings include Photography A Level and the Global Perspectives and Research Pre-U, where students explore issues challenging people across the world, and develop valuable analytical, research, and problem-solving skills.

Every student's programme includes a combination of academic study, sport, cultural and current affairs, service to the community, and our unique enrichment programme. This consists of a series of one-term courses chosen from a broad range of offerings developed by staff and shaped by student requests. Students also undertake independent projects and practical research as part of the optional Extended Project Qualification.

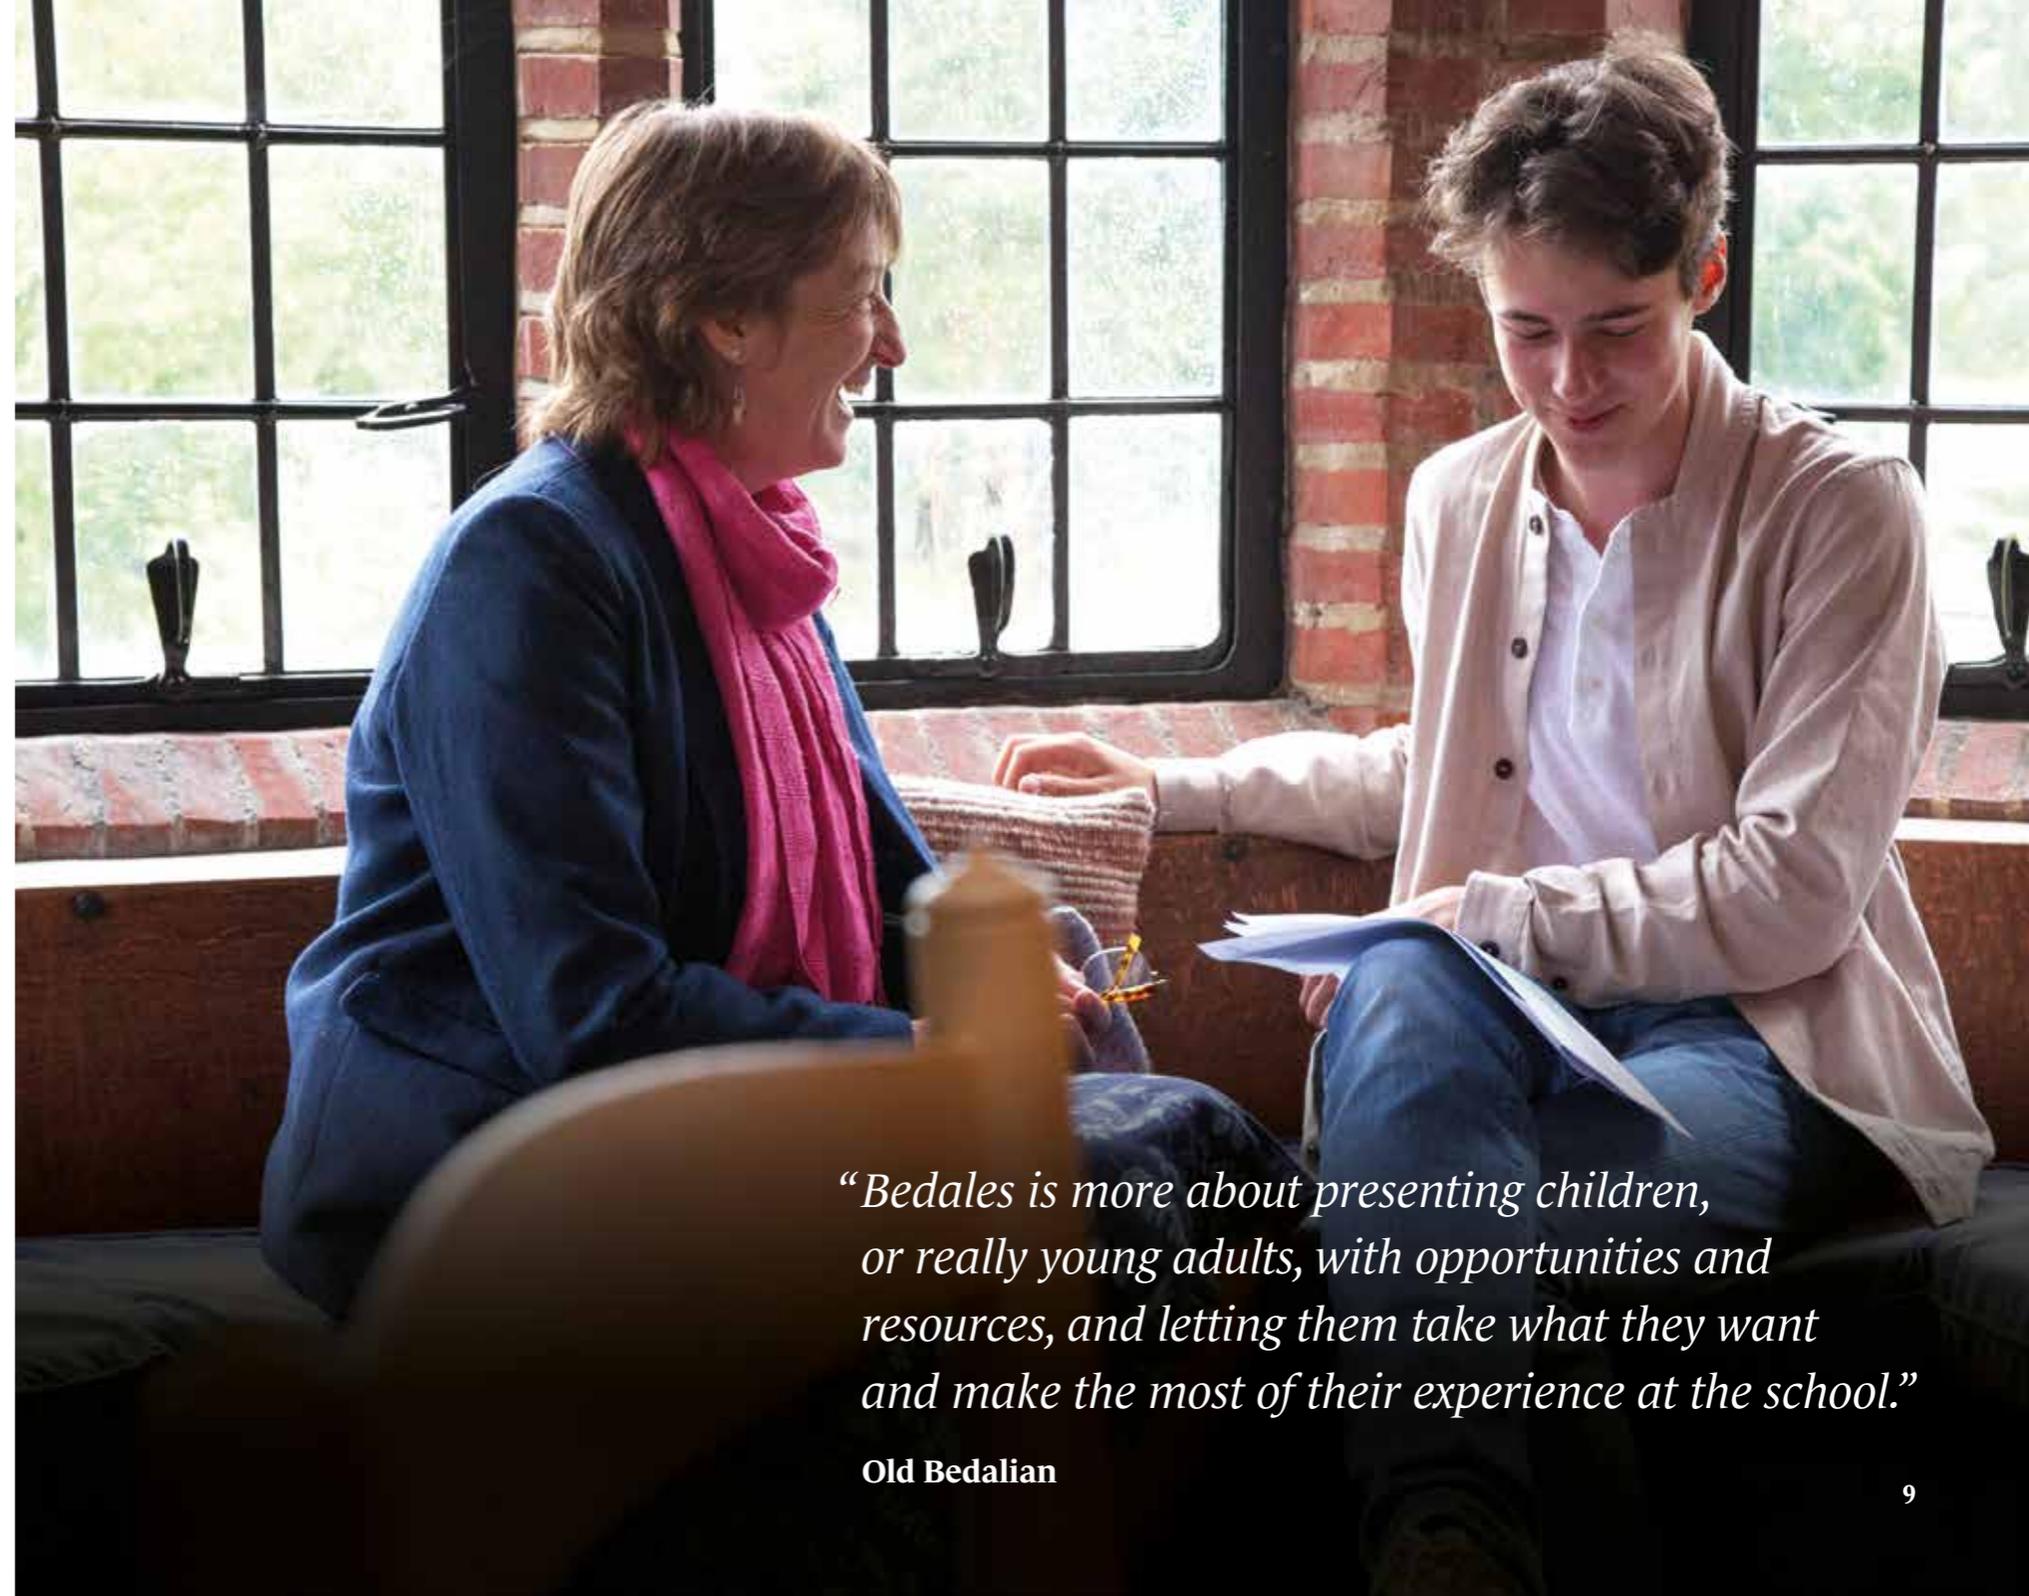

We expect our Sixth Form students to take on positions of responsibility in the school, such as contributing to one of the many student committees or acting as role model and mentor to our younger students.

Academic monitoring and tutoring

Each student is allocated a personal tutor to oversee academic progress through one-to-one and small tutor group meetings. Openness, high expectations and close collaboration are the guiding principles of all discussion with students. This applies to personal and pastoral matters, and to discipline and academic progress. Students' progress is closely monitored, and half-termly academic reviews include their own reflections on progress, and are shared with parents. This is designed to ensure agreement about priorities for students' work, and how they will go about it.

A programme of academic enrichment, operating across the curriculum, ensures that our most able students are fully stretched. Activities include additional visits, talks and academic societies.

Every student has a houseparent, who pays particular attention to the student's overall welfare and wellbeing, and is in regular liaison with the student's tutor and parents.

“Bedales is more about presenting children, or really young adults, with opportunities and resources, and letting them take what they want and make the most of their experience at the school.”

The school day

Day students participate fully in Bedales school life, to the extent that they typically follow the same full programme as boarders.

After the last class ends at 5.30pm, day students, like their boarding counterparts, enjoy the many events and activities that take place in the school every evening, including Jaw and Civics. The weekly Jaw engages students in moral and spiritual concerns, usually through visiting speakers. The Civics programme gives students the opportunity to hear views and opinions from highly regarded personalities from a variety of backgrounds, industries or professions.

These events are very popular for the students as it gives them a real insight into other lives, worlds, issues and potential careers.

On Wednesday afternoons students take part in sports fixtures or can choose to study, attend a club or activity, or walk into Petersfield in small groups. During weekday evenings there are designated 'quiet times' when students must either attend a cultural event (such as a concert or play) or be in a place of work.

“That an educational institution, instead of being a place of authority and conformity, could, at its best, cherish and celebrate the poetry and romance of life, was, and remains, wonderful and precious to me.”

Boarding

Relationships intensify when people work and live closely together – and relationships are key to the Bedales approach and ethos. A family environment is a unique feature, with students from 13–17 years living alongside each other in dormitories where the older and more experienced students are mentors for younger ones, closely supervised by houseparents. Mixed age dormitories are a unique feature of Bedales boarding. In 6.2 (Upper Sixth), boarding and day students live in the separate co-educational boarding house with boys and girls on different floors.

The working day is long at the school and the curriculum rich, and boarders are able to make the most of these opportunities. At weekends, students might choose to relax or take part in a wide range of weekend activities. Events might include a trip to a London exhibition, attending the local Sustainability Fair, assisting at the Bedales Dog Show, or a bowling or cinema trip. Boarders can opt to go home between Saturday lunchtime and Sunday evening, although there are times when attendance at the weekend is required – ‘all in’ weekends for the cast of a forthcoming play, for example.

“It was virtually impossible to try everything because there were just so many things that you could have a go at.”

Co-curriculum

From the moment they enter the school, students are encouraged to take part in the wider life of the community.

Students might choose to join a choir, orchestra or band, take part in drama performances or write for a publication. They can attend a variety of talks and performances featuring our own students and an impressive programme of visiting practitioners and performers. The activities programme, compulsory for Blocks 3–5, is open to all students who can choose from a wide range of cerebral, social and physical activities to follow an existing interest or try something new. Sixth Form students take the opportunity to lead some of these activities.

Our sporting programme combines broad participation and enjoyment of regular exercise, with competitive team sport. We offer access to top quality coaching, outstanding facilities, a competitive spirit (but with a strong emphasis on fair play and enjoyment), and opportunities for gifted and talented sports players to develop elite skills. Overseas cultural and sports tours are a regular feature at the school. We are also able to take advantage of easy access to mainland Europe for languages trips.

Academic societies allow students to develop their interests, exchange ideas and engage in debate beyond the classroom. From maths to poetry and everything in-between, students can either join an existing society or start their own.

The school's voluntary local service scheme might involve students helping younger children with reading at a local primary school or making a weekly commitment volunteering at a charity. We are constantly refreshing our programme of international volunteering and exchanges to make the most of new opportunities; recent trips have included Africa, the US and India.

The Duke of Edinburgh's award scheme is active at Bedales, taking advantage of the school's location in the South Downs National Park which stretches across Hampshire, West and East Sussex, and many students opt to progress to the Gold award.

Our Three Schools' Council is a forum where pupils from our Pre-prep, Prep and Senior schools discuss and inform policy and change with senior staff. We were one of the first schools in the country to give pupils such a voice.

Beyond Bedales

Bedales students are attractive to top universities, art colleges and music conservatoires. Besides strong A Level results, students have a reputation for creativity and independence of mind, and have frequently offered universities unusual academic and personal profiles in their applications.

Many of our alumni remain actively engaged with the school, returning to offer advice and support for the students following in their footsteps. We make the most of Bedalians' willingness to learn from each other and to share experiences.

“Bedales is such an idealistic place, somewhere that also instils a strong moral compass in its students, which is incredibly valuable.”

Admissions

Approximately two-thirds of Bedales students are boarders. Most of our families are based in London and the South East UK, whilst about 10 per cent work or live overseas. Central London (Waterloo Station) and the major airports of Gatwick and Heathrow are all approximately an hour away. A daily minibus service picks up day pupils from surrounding towns and villages.

We are committed to broadening access to the school by offering financial support and the school allocates more than 5 per cent of its fee income to this. We participate in a number of bursary initiatives which are means-tested and awarded according to need, including the John Badley Foundation, Buttle UK and Royal Springboard.

In addition to academic awards, scholarships are offered in art, design, music, drama and sport. Award holders have access to an individual research grant to develop their specific interests and appetite for enquiry.
